Stony Plain Liberal Association Hold Two District Meetings.

Two meetings were held by the Stony Plain Liberal Association last week-one at Golden Spike, and another at Graminia, both being large and enthusiastic meetings. Due to the fact that the Legislature was holding night sessions, it was impossible to have some of the Assemblymen speak at the meeting.

At Golden Spike Mr George J. Bryan was the speaker, while at Graminia both Mrs R E Wood and Mr Geo. J. Bryan were the speakers.

Golden Spike, Messrs Fred Hennig, Ph Eber-At hardt and Geo. were appointed a committee to look after Liberal interests at that poll.

Graminia already has a Liberal organization under the leadership of Mr Claude Robertsod.

The outstanding feature of these meetings was the marked swing to Liberal ideas and the pronounced opposition to the Socialistic tendency of the C. C F.

Another Liberal meeting is to be held at Irvington on Thursday, March 22d, when G. H. Van Allen and G. J. Bryan will speak.

It is the intention of the Liberal Association to hold further meetings at Winterburn, St. Michael and Toma hawk this month, altho the exact dates have not yet been decided on.

"Fresh from the Gardens"

The World's Great Handicap

In an address delivered recently at Watrous, Sask, Professor Swanson of the University of Saskatchewan, said he could see signs on the horizon of a return to economic santly, but "fear is in the way". He said: "the renational fear, political fear, biological fear, fear of Japan, economic fear. Life is overshadowed and overclouded with fear. The time has now arrived."

Life is overshadowed and overclouded with fear. The time has now arrived," he added, "to take place of leadership in our country, in overcoming these fears. On the Western plains there is no place for this fear."

Then in the United States we have Bruce Barton, one of the most observant and sanest writers of the day, pointing out that the economists seem pretty well agreed that the bottom of the depression has been reached and passed and that business is fundamentally better all over the world, while of his own country he says it is now in the position of a sick man on his way back to health; that while a great many medicines are being applied, some of which probably help the patient's recovery and some of which but, the important fact is that health is returning, and that the country can stand a considerable dose of patent medicines without permanent harm, and that when the country is really healthy it will throw the patent medicine bottles out of the window, discharge the most radical doctors, and go on its way.

Bruce Barton, however, points to two very important things for people to remember and heed. It is, he says, vitally important to keep an open mind. Things never again are going to be the same as they were; on the other hand, they are not going to be so entirely different as some enthusiatic people would have us believe. It is, he says, no use sighing for the return of the good old days; it is even less useful to assume that all the past was bad and must be discarded. His advice is: "Keep moderate, keep ficetable."

Most important, says Bruce Barton, "fight all fear", and he urges that the words of Thoreau be placed where they can be seen every day: "Nothing is so much to be feared as fear. The sin that God hates is fear; He thinks atheism innocent in comparison."

It is undeniably true that fear is the great obstacle to a return to more normal conditions throughout the world. It is fear that prevents disarmament and continues to impose upon the taxpayers of the nations the trushing burden of huge armies, navies, air fleets, and the whole complicated parapheranila of war establishments. It is fear that leads nations to cated paraphernalia of war establishments. It is fear that leads nations to erect hostite tariffs against the goods and products of other nations. It is fear that is keeping untold millions of money locked up instead of it coursing through all the channels of business and providing work and wages for countless thousands at present unemployed. It is fear that is distorting the minds of people and making them the easy victims of others who preach the gospel of discontent and despair.

minds of people and making them the easy victims of others who preach the gospel of discontent and despair.

Fear never makes for progress. Being destructive of constructive thought and initiative, it acts as a brake on progress, preventing the inunching of new enterprises, discouraging expansion and further developments. Through the engendering of timidity and lack of self-confidence, fear leads man to withdraw into himself and behind isolation-protective devices wherein he cowers but does nothing else. In a word, fear makes him a coward with a coward's outlook on life and its responsibilities.

It is the future of which most people appear to be fearful. They decline to recognise and accept the lessons and experiences of the peat as having any bearing upon or offering any guide for the problems and experiences of the present. Instead, in their fear, they say present difficulties are different from anything ever before known, and consequently neither thy nor any other person or persons know what to do or what ought to be done.

So, in their fear, they will not take actions which would not only accompliabs something but would inspire others to action, and the cumulative effect of which would be a solving of difficulties. Work would be provided for hundreds and thousands of people now idle if others having some reserves would take their courage in their hands and proceed to have this, that or the other little job done which demands attention. But, no, they will not venture even a small expenditure and thus they retard progress and help to perpetuate a condition of things which, if continued, will mean their own ruin.

Wise parents seek to overcome fear on the part of their children. They when parents seek to overcome rear on the part of their children. Intervolved to it judiciously but persistently because they realize that the obsession of fear is the greatest possible handicap in life. When leaders of the Canadian people in all walks of life should join forces in waging war on fear which now possesses so many, and they should join battle with those who, are engaged in capitalizing fear as an agency in the advancement of feelings of economic despair.

There should be some for secure, some for bouquets, some to brighten up shady corners, and others or window boxes, or tall screens. With a range of colors rivalling the rainbow, with a season of bloom for annuals from May until November and with helpth varying from an inch to over six feet, it is not at all difficult to plan a perfect Canadian flower garden. Too many people are content with one sowing of vegetables. But that custom, fortunately is disappearing. Many vegetables are best planted every early. Spinach, peas, lettuce, and radish, for instance, cannot be put in too early. Just as soon as the soil is fit to work is the time for the first of these. But with the tendens, excumbers, corn, and the started plants there is no rush, as long as there is a possibility of frost. Then, too, it is a big mischaet op lant all at one time. Practically everywhere two or three planting at intervals of tyn days of many vegetables can be made and thus the harvest appead over a longer period. ings at intervals of tpn days of many vegetables can be made and thus the harvest spread over a longer period. With some things, however, and some places this is not possible but the harvest may be extended by using several varieties. This course is best followed with peas. The early plant-ed peas are the best yielders, but by sowing an early variety, a medium sowing an early variety, a medium sort and a late cropper, though all are planted the same day, there will be a difference of ten days to three eeks in maturity.

NEED A BETTER SYSTEM FOR HANDLING RELIEF

Ottawa.—Immediate action with a view to evolving a permanent system of handling unemployment relief and other pressing social problems is urged in a statement issued by the Canadian Council on Child and Family Welfare. The statement is an analysis of relief conditions now existing and a series of suggestions for the evolution of permanent measures of social aid to those unable to support themselves.

Any effective scheme of a perman-ent character, the statement says, must recognize frankly that many people now out of work can never be absorbed again in gainful employ-ment and that unemployment insurance is not only not a cure for the present condition, but will fall short of meeting the problem on a long-term basis.

None-the-less, the council believes, unemployment insurance should be initiated at the earliest possible moment. It should be on a contributory ment. It should be on a contributory basis and be actuarially sound. At the same time the present Dominion, provincial, and municipal relief organizations should be re-cast on efficient lines.

Causes of dependency, other than unemployment, such as sickness acci-dent, and old sige, should be tabulat-ed and insurance of a contributory character provided for relief in such cases. Other causes of dependency which can not be worked into an actuarial system would have to be met by a permanent system of direct relief.

To avoid the debilitating effect of living on relief a program of re-lief work should be launched.

Establishment of those of the un-employed with experience in agricul-ture on the land, is urged. The state-ment says the industrialization of the country in recent years and the re-lief provided in the cities have caused a drift cityward and the establish-ment of a better equilibrium between urban and rural population demands careful attention.

Now if the feet cleaning prop osition is confined to hens, we should worry! But what is both ering the writer is this: That the housewives, on reading the story may get their heads together and invent some contrivance to clean Hubby's feet before he is allowed to enter the house. Possibly nothing has occurred which causes more ripples on the sea of matrimony than Hubbies trailing mud into their homes. While I have no fault to find with women reminding their husbands that their house is not a race track where only mudders have a chance to win, but, I ask, is not's similar contraption as that employed by the poulary man fraught with som danger? No doubt under ordinary circumstances and with practice, Hubbies would be able to negotiate the entrance to their homes: but on rare occasions, such as during a bonspiel or a lodge dance night, dire results might happen, and the wife might find that instead of having floors to clean, that Hubby might require some dusting. These are things which we mere men should think about, and be prepared."

Peter was taking the stairs two at Peter was taking the stairs two at a time, intent upon returning to his work for the afternoon when he looked up to see a girl unlecking the door across the hall from his own. So, his new neighbor was a girl. His first intention was to ignore her, but urriestly prompted a second glance, and he found himself face to face with Avis Worth. He had not seen her since the Hoyt party at the club. "Hello, Peter," she greeted him casily, as if she had been a tenant in Annex Hall for a long time.

"Are you sorry?" she laughed at his consteraction.
"Of course, not," he hastened to assure her. "What could be more pleasant taan a friend for a neighbor?" But I'm afraid you won't find me very sociable. I'm so busy these days I can't find time to eat."
"Working on your piece for the exhibit," Avis observed with an eager concern. "How does it go? I'm dying to see it, Peter."
He ignored that. "But why the outlay?" he indicated her spaclous studio apartment.

She affected a pouting expression.

As for bring sociable, I shan't trouble you because I'll be just as busy as you are. So there! Only," her eyes were lowers. For a moment and then met his wistfully, "here's an idea—there is one way we both might save some time. I am going to have a naid for morning and you have a naid for morning and you can run in here for a ings and you can run in here for a bite of breakfast or lunch, often. bite of breakfast or lunch, often. That will save some of your preclous time that you can't spare to look up a restaurant." Het now was practical and casual, as if she were redjusting the computation of time by the calendar and clock, to accommodate him, and yet doing nothing unusual.

He lauched tolerantly. "To afraid

He laughed tolerantly, "Tm afraid it wouldn't work vut that way, We'd get to talking and take two hours out instead of u few minutes. Thanks, though, for your neighborly thoughtfulneas." He was unlocking his door, but Avis made no movement to eater her own rooms: He pushed his door open and she sauntred across the hall.

They were in the room now. He left the door standing open. "Oh, it's beautiful!" Avis exclaimed. She moved over to the clay figure on the turnstand and stood gazing at it with genuine admiration. Finally, she said softly, "Peter, it's marvelous. The nrive is already worth?" The prize is already yours.

He laughed a confused denial of her praise, pleased nevertheless.

"It's rather good, I guess, but I'm not thinking of the prize. Now that it is almost finished, I am much more interested in the work itself. I think I might be able to sell it for a pretty good price if I do it in marble, in flesh tones, perhaps." He was gazing at the figure with a fond and critical eye, as a parent regards his firsh and blood child. Avis might not have been present, for all he was nutteing her or thinking about her. She glanced around the room for something to detreat: his attention from the clay figure on the stand.

Camilla, Camilla, she thought, doe Camilla, Camilla, the thought, does he never talk nor think of anything except Camilla and work? She feigned an incredulous surprise at bis remark, "I should think nothing would take the first place from a husband." She ghrugged. "But, then, all people aren't alike. Love and marriage mean so little to some girla. No wonder men can't understand them. They don't all know that a man needs lots of love and sympathy and comforting to make him happy and keep him so," she observed wisely and with a tone of regret for all the wrecked marriages of such negligent wives.

"What do you know about it?"

Peter only seemed to be amused. He did not attempt to defend Camilla.

"Some women are wives by instinct. They don't have to be married to understand men," she still maintained that sober, impersonal air of rare wisdom. Then she roused suddenly and said brightly, "But you

"Then do come over this evening," she urged hospitably. "Any time you have a minute to relax, drop in. You can't work every minute." "But I might interrupt your work. I thought you came here for seclu-sion." he reminded her.

Avis lifted her hands eloquently. Avis lifted her hands elequently. "One hour every day without an in-terruption would seem like a century to me. I can't go into seclusion all of a sudden. Besides, even if I. do want to work, I can't take it that seriously. I expect to throw a lot of parties—studies stuff, you know. I'm parties—studio stuff, you know. Fur giving a housewarning soon and you will have to take time out to be there, don't you 'forget. You and Camilia," she added as an after-thought.

There were footsteps outside, tap-papping on the stairs and along the hall, and presently Sylvia stood in the doorway. "Hello," she dad briefly, after a glance at Avis without recog-nition.

"Here she is!" "Here sae is:" Feter exclaimed with obvious relief. "My model, Miss Todd. Miss Werth. You may be needing a good model yourself. New prospect," he advised Sylvia, already busy with arranging his materials.

"Perhaps I can use you sometime."
Avis told Sylvia with a patronizing air. "Well, then, I'll run along and the you two get to work. Bye, Peter," she smiled friendly, and sauntered

It would be just my luck to get such a neighbor when I ambe to get such a neighbor when I ambe just my luck to get such a neighbor when a series. "You don't sound very crasy about her," Silvia wentured carelessty. "She's nothing to me," Peter shrugged. "I said she was a friend. She lant't even that—merely a acquantyance. One of the class at National. It's all the same to me it I never see her again. Fact is, I always made it a point to steer clear of her when I could. Now she lives across the hall and suggests that I run in when I could. Now she lives across the hall and suggests that I run in to have tea with her," he grimaced. Sylvia laughed with genuine amusement, knowing more about the situation than he was aware. Almost, she was tempted to warn him of Avia' intentions, for her sympathies really were with Peter. But her youthfully acquired sophistication maintained that any man could take care of himself. The chances were inhety-nine to one that any woman ninety-nine to one that any w got the worst of an affair with got the worst of an anair with man. This happened to be a rare in which she wished the man I chiefly because he was not the
